PREFACE

THE kindly support and appreciation given to my recent work of "The Royal Academy Exhibitors" have induced me to continue the series by producing a companion volume of the two earlier Societies, thereby carrying the records of the works of English artists back to the year 1760, when the first public exhibition took place in England. In common with the Lists of Exhibitors at other London Exhibitions, this work was compiled over thirty years ago, and the manuscript volumes have ever since been of great use for reference.

The catalogues of these early exhibitions are very difficult to obtain, and there is, I believe, no complete set of printed copies in existence, those in public institutions being completed by manuscript copies. To lovers of art this volume will present the only easily available means of knowing what pictures were exhibited by well-known artists before the foundation of the Royal Academy. Upwards of 13,000 works were shown at these exhibitions. To make the volume still more interesting, I have endeavoured to give an account of these Societies by reprinting portions of books written at the time of the exhibitions, or shortly afterwards. In this very little attempt has been made to introduce original matter, but I feel that the extracts from books now exceedingly scarce will prove of value.

As named portraits were rare in the catalogues of these exhibitions an index has been added, as well as of those portraits the names of which I have from different sources been able to trace; in the same index are included the owners of mansions mentioned in the architectural portion of the work.

In view of the special interest which sporting pictures offer to sportsmen a separate index has been compiled, giving the names of any horses or other animals which form the subject of pictures, in addition to the names of their owners.

This book contains nearly the same amount of printed matter as one of the eight volumes in the Royal Academy series, but does not consist of so many sheets, owing to the absence of the blank pages which were included in that series in order that subscribers might themselves continue for future years the lists of works exhibited.

The criticisms of Horace Walpole are not so frequent in this volume, as unfortunately his set of catalogues does not seem to have been preserved intact; though single copies which have been in his possession appear in some of the few now in existence.

1772. 113 The Establishment of the Academy of Arts.
Explanation of the Picture of the Establishment of the Academy of Arts, Erected
by His Britannic Majesty,

in the year 1769. In imitation of the School of Athens.

The principal Figure represents King George the III seated on his throne, and receiving the homage which the Academicians and artists of both sexes come to pay HIM, as their Founder.

The second figure is the Prince of Wales, who presents to the Monarch the map of Canada, conquered by his Majesty.

A little lower is the Prince, Bishop of Osnaburgh, applying himself entirely to study.

Next, on the same side, are seen Prince William Henry, under the figure of Mars, and his younger Brother, who applies himself to Painting, in order to encourage, by his example, those who cultivate this Art.

The Portrait of the Queen is placed between these two Princes, and the frame which incloses it is adorned with the customary attributes of Royalty.

At the foot of the Throne are seen the Princess Royal, and the Princess Augusta Sophia, who are examining a rich piece of silk, of English manufacture.

On the right is the young Prince Ernest Augustus, in the arms of his nurse; the circumstance of the bees, which seem to issue from his mouth, alludes to what history relates concerning the birth of Homer.

The other Figures are accessory. Such for instance, is that of a Fame, who presents to the King a basin filled with medals and other prizes, designed for those who shall excel in their art.

The two statues which are a little above the throne, denote, Majesty and Prudence. On the King's right hand is placed Raphael, and on the left Michael Angelo, who propose the institution of prizes for the encouragements of Arts.

The chair, on which the King is seated, is surmounted by a Medusa's head, who threatens, and keeps in respect, all those who might be inclined to deviate from their duty.

On the left of the Picture is seen, in the background, the city of London, who come in a body to pay their homage to their Sovereign.

Lastly, as the Academy commands a respectful silence to all its members in the praises of the Monarch, it is not surprising that the Sieur Mannini, who is member of no academy, has painted himself in this picture, as receiving the dictates of Mercury, who has furnished him with the subject of it.

 "Behold (your Forefathers) have taught you statutes and Judgments, keep therefore and do them; for this is your Wisdom and Understanding in the Sight of all Nations, which shall hear all these Statutes, and say; surely this great Nation is a wise and Understanding People. For what Nation is there so great, that hath Statutes and Judgments so righteous as all this Law set before you: only take heed to thyself and keep them diligently least thou forget (that it is this Law that constitutes an Englishman, and as such that thou art distinguished from all men on Earth;) but teach them thy sons and thy son's sons: bind them for a Sign upon thine Hands; and they shall be as Frontlets between thine Eyes; write them upon the Posts of thy House, and on thy Gates."

 —Moses.

1774. 165 Caius Marius on the ruins of Carthage.

SERVANT.

I am sent hither, Marius, from my lord,
Sextilius the Prætor, to relieve thee,
And warn thee that thou strait depart this place,
Else he the Senate's edict must obey,
And treat thee as the foe of Rome.

CAIUS MARIUS.

But did he,
Did he, Sextilius, bid thee say all this?
Was he too proud to come and see his Master,
That rais'd him out of nothing? Was he not
My menial servant once, and wip'd these shoes,
Ran by my chariot-wheels, my pleasures watcht,
And fed upon the voidings of my table?
Durst he affront me with a sordid alms?
And send a saucy message by a slave?
Hence with thy scraps: back to the teeth I dash 'em.
Begone whilst thou art safe. Hold, stay a little.

SERVANT.

What answer would you have me carry back?

CAIUS MARIUS.

Go to Sextilius, tell him thou hast seen
Poor Caius Marius banish'd from his country,
Sitting in sorrow on the naked earth

Amidst an ample fortune once his own,
Where now he cannot claim a turf to sleep on.

[Exit Servant.

(one hundred and forty guineas) for the present year.

1779. 136 The Earl of Chatham, standing on a sarcophagus, is represented in a speaking attitude; on the one side of him is Learning; on the other Eloquence, lamenting his loss. The Sarcophagus is supported by History, who has recorded the conquests made during his administration. On a tablet is the kind mother sitting on a throne between her sons in infancy, rewarding the merits of the one, and giving Liberty and Power to the other. On her right hand is Prudence mourning over his urn and preserving his remains, on the other side is Pallas lamenting his loss. Learning, Wisdom, Eloquence, and Prudence are the characteristics of the senator.

181 A portrait of a gentleman.

1769. 182 A family piece.

(Containing portraits of Sir George Warren, his lady and daughter. Lady Warren is seated in a graceful and easy posture, with a fronting attitude; but with her face slightly turned to her right, having her left elbow leaning upon a pedestal, and the hand extended over her daughter's shoulder, a girl about six or seven years old, who is standing by her. The young lady has her hands gently crossed over her bosom, and is caressing a little bird, which she holds in one hand. Sir George, habited in a picturesque style, is standing rather to the left, and somewhat more backward in the picture than his lady. He has his right arm moderately extended, and is directing her attention to a distant object. This picture was at Pointon Hall, Cheshire. The above description is given by the Rev. John Romney from a sketch of the picture, so the picture itself may differ slightly.)

(On going carefully over the exhibited works of this great miniature painter, I find several errors in the Royal Academy Exhibitors, vol. vii, page 161. The name of the first should be John Smart and not Junr., all the exhibits under that name are by the father, except 1800, 686, 906, 1802, 542, 646, 1803, 504, 855. These six were all by the son, and should have been placed under the next name. The father remained true to the Society of Artists until 1783, and on his return from India in 1796, the Society had ceased to exist.)

THE SOCIETY OF ARTISTS OF GREAT BRITAIN

who was himself a member of the Society from 1766 to 1772, published in 1808.*

THE first systematic writer on art in England was Horace Walpole, the youngest son of Sir Robert Walpole, K.G., his mother being the daughter of John Shorter, of Bybrook, in Kent. He published the last volume of his "Anecdotes of Painting" in 1780, although he acknowledged it was written ten years before. This work was afterwards carried on by Edward Edwards, and published in 1808, after his death, as "Anecdotes of Painters." The following extracts from this book give some idea of the condition of the Fine Arts in England previous to the founding of the Incorporated Society of Artists:

"One of the first persons who contributed to elevate the arts from their depressed condition was Mr. George Vertue, whose affection for engraving was accompanied by an almost equal attachment to the study of antiquities. . . . But while he was collecting, he had no opportunity of arranging the anecdotes of which he was possessed, and they were left in a very imperfect and undigested state at his death, which happened in 1756. These papers were purchased of Mr. Vertue's widow by the Honourable Mr. Walpole, who was certainly the fittest person to possess them, being the best qualified to arrange and polish the rough materials which Mr. Vertue had collected. . . . In addition to the anecdotes of the lives of the artists themselves, it has been thought necessary to subjoin some account of the encouragement and assistance which the arts received, by the establishment of several institutions which were formed before the accession of his present Majesty (George III) to the throne."

"After the Peace of Aix-la-Chapelle, the nation appeared to be roused to a spirit of exertion and improvement in the arts, which had not been known in England before that period; and several institutions or societies were formed, whose avowed intentions were to encourage the talents of their countrymen. Such were the Antigallican and Dilettanti Societies, but especially the Society for the Encouragement of Arts, Manufactures and Commerce."

"This noble institution, which was founded by the liberality of a very small number of noblemen and gentlemen in the year 1754, has fully answered the wishes of its first founders."

"The exertions of the Society, which were so laudably directed towards stimulating the talents of the rising generation, received very essential aid from the liberality of an individual nobleman of high rank. This was the Duke of Richmond, who, soon after his return from his travels, opened an admirable school for the study of painting and sculpture at his own house in Privy Garden, Whitehall. It consisted of a gallery or great room, fitted up with every conveniency requisite for the accommodation of students, and furnished with a number of gesses, or casts in plaster of Paris, moulded from the most select antique and modern figures at that time at Rome and Florence. To this elegant school the young artists were invited by a public advertisement."

"In consequence of this invitation several young artists of that time attended the room, and although his Grace did not exactly fulfil the expectations of Mr. Cipriani and Mr. Wilton, yet the students were permitted to draw there for several years, etc."

"The first attempt towards the establishment of an academy is mentioned by Mr. Walpole, in his anecdotes of Mr. Vertue, the Engraver, where it is said, that he drew in the Academy formed by several artists, with Sir Godfrey Kneller at their head, in the year 1711."

"Afterwards we find that Sir James Thornhill formed an academy in his own house in the Piazza, Covent Garden. But this was not of long duration, for it commenced in 1724, and he died in 1734; which reduced the artists again to seek some new seminary, etc."

"But the artists were not long in this unsettled state, for a few of them (chiefly foreigners), finding themselves without the necessary example of a living model, formed a small society, and established their regular meetings of study in a convenient apartment in Greyhound Court, Arundel Street. The principal conductor of this seminary was Mr. G. Michael Moser."

"Here they were visited by some of their contemporary artists (Mr. Hogarth, Mr. Wills, and Mr. Ellis), who were so well pleased with the propriety of their conduct, and so thoroughly convinced of the utility of the institution that a general union took place; and the members thereby becoming numerous, they required and sought for a more convenient situation and accommodation for their school. How long they remained in Greyhound Court cannot now be known; but at length they removed to a very convenient situation for their purpose, in Peter's Court, St. Martin's Lane; and it can be ascertained that they were settled there before the year 1739."

"In this situation the study of the human figure was carried on till the year 1767, when they removed to Pall Mall for better accommodation."

"The Foundling Hospital, so humane in its primitive intention, was incorporated by charter, dated 1739. A few years after that period the present building was erected; but as the income of the charity could, with no propriety, be expended upon decorations, many of the principal artists of that day voluntarily exerted their talents for the purpose of ornamenting several of the apartments of the Hospital, which otherwise would have remained without decoration. The pictures thus produced, and generously given, were permitted to be seen by any visitor, upon proper application. The spectacle was so new that it made a considerable impression upon the public, and the favourable reception these works experienced impressed the artists with an idea of forming a public Exhibition, which scheme was carried into full effect in the following manner.

“As that public-spirited Society, which had then been some time established for the Encouragement of Arts, Manufactures and Commerce, possessed large, convenient, and elegant accommodations, the principal artists united and petitioned the society to allow them the use of their great room, which request was very liberally granted; and the first exhibition opened April 21st, 1760. To this the public were admitted gratis, the catalogues being sold at the price of sixpence to those who required them.”

“The success of this first public display of art was more than equal to general expectation. Yet there were some circumstances, consequent to the arrangement of the pictures, with which the artists were very justly dissatisfied; they were occasioned by the following improprieties. The Society, in the same year, had offered premiums for the best painting of history, and landscape: and it was one of the conditions, that the pictures produced by the candidates should remain in the great room for a certain time; consequently they were blended with the rest, and formed part of the exhibition. As it was soon known which performances had obtained the premiums, it was justly supposed, by such persons who were deficient in judgement, that those pictures were the best in the room, and consequently deserved the chief attention. This partial, though unmerited selection, gave displeasure to the artists in general. Nor were they pleased with the mode of admitting the spectators, for every member of the Society had the discretionary privilege of introducing as many persons as he chose, by means of gratuitous tickets, and consequently the company was far from being select, or suited to the wishes of the exhibitors. These circumstances, together with the interference of the Society in the concerns of the exhibition, determined the principal artists to withdraw themselves, which they did in the next year.”

“Encouraged by the success of their first attempt, they engaged the great room in Spring Garden; and their first exhibition at that place opened on the 9th of May, 1761. Here they found it necessary to change their mode of admission, which they did by the following method. The catalogue was the ticket of admission; consequently one catalogue would admit a whole family in succession, for a shilling, which was its price. But this mode of admission was still productive of crowd and disorder, and it was therefore altered the next year.”

The exhibition, which was the second in this country, contained several works of the best English artists, among which, many of the pictures were equal to any masters then living in Europe; and so strikingly conspicuous were their merits, and so forcible was this display of art, that it drew from the pen of Roubilliac, the sculptor, the following lines, which were stuck up in the exhibition room, and were also printed in the St. James's Chronicle, May 14, 1761.

Pretendu Connoisseur qui fur l'Antique glose, Idolatrant le hom, sans Connoitre la Chose,

 Cette prevention injuste.
 Et bien etonné Conviendras
 Qu'il ne faut pas qu'un Mecenas
 Pour revoir Le Siecle d'Auguste.

"In the following season (1762) they opened on May 17, and they ventured to fix the price of admission at one shilling each person, but had the precaution to affix a conciliatory preface (given on page 317) to their catalogue, which was given gratis."

"This mode of admittance was found to answer all the wished-for purposes, and the visitors, who were highly respectable, were also perfectly gratified with the display of art, which, for the first time they beheld with ease and pleasure to themselves. The exhibition, thus established, continued at the Spring Garden Room, under the direction and management of the principal artists, by whom it was first promoted, and they were soon after joined by many of those who had continued to exhibit in the Strand; . . . The artists who formed the Exhibition at the Spring Garden Room, finding themselves possessed of property by the profits of their exhibitions, thought themselves authorized to endeavour to obtain a legal establishment; for which purpose they solicited and obtained a charter, which His Majesty was graciously pleased to confirm to them by his signature on the 26th of January, 1765."

"Having obtained the charter, it might naturally be supposed that the Society would be placed in a situation, and furnished with the means of cultivating their mutual interests to the best advantage; but, unfortunately, they were scarcely collected when dissensions arose, which in the course of three years caused an irreparable breach, and in the end a total dissolution of the incorporated Society. This event was, in a great degree, occasioned by the loose and unguarded manner in which the charter was composed; for it did not provide against the admission of those who were distinguished neither by their talents as artists, nor by their good conduct as men."

"In consequence of this indiscriminate admission of persons, many of the inferior practitioners were no sooner seated as members of the Society but they began to cavil at the conduct of the Directors, though they were the original founders and chief supporters of the Society; and a party was soon formed by whom it was resolved to exclude several of the principal Directors from their official situation, although they had no complaint to allege against them. For the purpose of carrying this project into effect, a few of the refractory members, to the number of seven, met at a tavern and issued the following printed letter, which was circulated to the members:

"SIR,

"At the last General Quarterly Meeting of the Society of Artists, a law was proposed, and carried by a great majority, to secure the election of eight new Directors annually. This proposition for a law being referred to the Directors, has since been returned with their absolute refusal, notwithstanding the Attorney General's opinion, that the Society has full power, by their charter, to make such law, and to which opinion the Directors had previously determined to abide; and, as a further aggravation, it must be observed, that the Directors were not satisfied with this use of their power, but added to it most reproachful reflections on the Fellows of the Society.

"This is therefore to desire your attendance on Thursday next, at six o'clock, at the Castle Tavern, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, to meet the rest of the Fellows of the Society, in order to consider of the proper persons to serve as Directors for the year ensuing, whereby it is hoped, that such persons will be named who will consider the general interests of the Society.

"We are, etc.

"Castle Tavern, Henrietta Street,
"8 o'clock, Oct. 8, 1768."

"In consequence of this invitation, a meeting was held, and the factious party, with gross impropriety, insisted, that all who were there assembled should vote at the ensuing election agreeably to the resolutions which should then be passed by the majority of that meeting. This proposition was resisted by many, and much confusion and disorder took place."

"Not content with this arbitrary proceeding, one of the party took upon himself to call upon every member who had attended the Castle Tavern meeting, and requested to see his balloting list, which request was made for the purpose of putting a private mark, by which it might be known, at the future scrutiny, who had voted according to their influence, and who had failed. The result of these violent proceedings was what might easily have been foreseen by the factious cabal—no less than a sudden defection of the most respectable artists, chiefly those who had been the founders of the exhibition, and the supporters of the private academy.

"At the next Festival of St. Luke, the day specified by the charter for the election of Officers and Directors, it was found, upon scrutinizing the votes, that nearly two-thirds of the primitive Directors were excluded; among which Mr. Hayman was dispossessed of the chair, and Mr. Kirby elected in his place. Mr. Newton, the secretary, was also removed, and other changes were made; but eight of the former Directors were retained. This resolution introduced several very inferior artists into the places of the most respectable of those from whom the Society, together with the private academy and the exhibition, received their origin and support. This sudden revolution of the order by which the affairs of the Society had been directed satisfied, no one except those of the cabal with whom the order originated; yet it was vainly hoped that peace might be restored, and that the new Directors would unite to accomplish that desirable acquisition; but the first meeting that was held by the new Directors, when they took their seats, convinced the considerate part of the Society, that private pique and the thirst for power were the only motives which directed their conduct, and occasioned their clamour for what they called reform."

"The majority of the new Directors, being the persons who composed the party which clamoured for the law to exclude, annually, eight Directors, still continued their former demands, and, far from endeavouring to restore the peace of the Society, did, by their improper conduct, only increase the disgust of those who had before received sufficient provocation, from their illiberal treatment. The consequence was, that those eight gentlemen of the former Directors, who remained in the new arrangement were so much disgusted with the behaviour of their new colleagues in office, that they retired from the Society, and formally signified their resignation by the following letter, addressed to the President:

"SIR,

"Though we had the strongest objections to the unwarrantable manner in which most of the present Directors of the Society were elected, yet our affection for the community was such, that we had, in spite of every motive to the contrary, resolved to keep possession of our directorships. But finding the majority of the present Directors bent upon measures which we think repugnant to our charter, and tending to the destruction of the Society, we judge it no longer safe to keep possession of our employments; therefore do hereby resign them, that no part of the blame, which will naturally follow the measures now pursuing, may, in any shape, be laid upon us.

From the motions and insinuations of the last meeting, we clearly see what plan is to be pursued; and we likewise clearly perceive, that however odious and hurtful such a plan may be, we shall find it utterly impossible to prevent it.

We would not, however, by any means be understood to object to every remaining Director. You, Sir, and some others, we have the highest esteem for, as you have been elected into your offices without taking part in any intrigue, and, being men of honour and ability in your professions, are extremely proper to fill the places you occupy,

"We are, therefore,

"Your and their

"To JOSHUA KIRBY, ESQ.,

"President of the Society of Artists of Great Britain."

"The sentiments contained in this letter, and, above all, the resignations of the eight gentlemen whose names were subscribed to it, formed an event which the refractory part of the Society neither expected, nor were prepared to meet, and they were not a little exasperated, especially as they began to discover that an institution was forming which would very soon supersede, both in honour and public utility, all that their own endeavours could possibly achieve; this was no less than the establishment of a Royal Academy, under the immediate protection of His Majesty, in which themselves would bear no part. . . . These turbulent gentlemen, finding themselves unexpectedly forsaken by those they had endeavoured to control, were most highly provoked, and immediately proceeded to institute a private academy for themselves; but fearing His Majesty might take offence at their conduct, they very prudently presented a petition, through the means of Mr. Kirby, their President, who soon after delivered His Majesty's answer, that he did not mean to encourage one set of men more than another; that having extended his favour to the Society by his royal charter, he had also encouraged the new petitioners; that his intention was to patronize the arts; that the Society might rest assured his royal favour should be equally extended to both, and that he should visit their exhibitions as usual."

"His Majesty accordingly visited their next exhibition, which was, as before, at the Great Room, Spring Garden, and presented the Society with one hundred pounds; but this was the last time he favoured them by such honourable distinction. This Society continued their exhibitions at the Spring Garden until the year 1771, having resolved to build a room for themselves. . . ."

"The same year they also published a pamphlet, containing accusations against the gentlemen, members of the Royal Academy, whom they affectedly boasted to have expelled; meaning those gentlemen who had voluntarily retired from their Society. The next year they removed to the edifice which they had erected for themselves agreeably to their former advertisement."

"This building was no less than the large room, now called the Lyceum, in the Strand; the construction of which, together with the purchase of the ground, nearly exhausted the whole of their finances. Here they remained until they found their fund too much diminished to support the expenses of their establishment; and, perceiving that those who had exhibited with them began to diminish in their numbers, the Directors relinquished their room, and engaged another in Piccadilly which had been built for an auction room by a person of the name of Phillips, a woollen-draper, near the Black Bear Inn. Here they exhibited for two years, and until this time they had contrived to exhibit regularly every year; but afterwards their exhibitions were very irregular and uncertain, the next being at the Spring Garden Room in the year 1780. They then returned to the Lyceum in the Strand, where they exhibited in 1783, though they had long before disposed of those premises."

"After this they made no farther attempts until the year 1790, when they again tried to introduce themselves to public notice, and subjoined a preface to the catalogue of their exhibition."

"The next year they repeated their feeble efforts in the same room; but the articles they had then collected were very insignificant, most of which could not be considered as works of art; such as pieces of needlework, subjects in human hair, cut paper, and such similar productions, as deserve not the recommendation of a public exhibition."

Extracts from the Account of the Society written by JOHN PYE in his PATRONAGE OF BRITISH ART, published in 1845.

"It is singular to have to record that British Artists are indebted to the sympathy awakened amongst them for the Foundling Hospital for their first recognized claim to respectability as a community."

"In 1740 Hogarth commenced decorating the establishment, by presenting to it, on the 14th of May, his celebrated portrait of Captain Coram, and Handel came forward to enrich it by his oratorios. In 1745, the west wing of the well-known Foundling Hospital being finished, other artists followed the example of Hogarth, by giving, and promising to give, to the establishment works of art, and on December 31, 1746, a general Court, held at the Hospital, elected all such artists to be governors, with authority to meet at the Foundling annually on the 5th of November, "to consider what further ornaments may be added to the building without expense to the charity." (The artists elected being F. Hayman, J. Wills, J. Highmore, T. Hudson, A. Ramsay, G. Lambert, S. Scott, P. Monomy, R. Wilson, S. Wale, E. Haytley, T. Carter, G. Moser, R. Taylor, J. Pine, W. Hogarth, M. Zinck, W. Rysbrack, and W. Jacobson.) Thus authorized, the artist-governors commenced holding their annual business meetings there; and, regarding liberty as the parent and friend of the arts, they made themselves convivial by dining together, and by drinking claret and punch, as was the custom of that time, in commemoration of the landing of King William the Third, which practice was continued for many years, and the punch-bowl they used, of blue and white china, is still preserved as a memorial of those social hours."

"The progressive course of these events, with the sanction of the King, the parliament and the aristocracy, rendered the Foundling Hospital a place of immense attraction, general resort and rendezvous, for people of all classes; and the contributions made by the artists (partly portraits of its distinguished patrons), constituting, as they did, the first collection of British works of art to which the public had the right of admission, contributed in no inconsiderable degree to increase that attraction; and, by making certain artists known and talked of by the multitude as lions of the day, acquired for the few some of those advantages which the many had long sought in vain; and hence arose the first idea of the whole body of British artists presenting themselves before the world, by making a public exhibition of their works."

"In consequence, on the 12th of November, 1759, they held a general meeting at the Turk's Head, Gerrard Street, Soho, when it was resolved that "once in every year, on a day in the second week in April, at a place that shall be appointed by a committee for carrying the design into execution, to be chosen annually, every painter, sculptor, architect, engraver, chaser, seal cutter and medallist, may exhibit their several performances. That the intention of this meeting is to endeavour to procure a sum of money to be distributed in charity towards the support of those artists whose age and infirmities, or other lawful hindrances, prevent them from being any longer candidates for fame. And it is resolved that the sum of one shilling be taken daily of each person who may come to visit the said performances. A committee of sixteen persons was chosen, i.e., six painters, two sculptors, two architects, two engravers, one seal cutter, one chaser, one medallist and the secretary, which office was accepted by Francis Milner Newton."

"At the second meeting, held December 1, 1759, it was resolved, that no copies be admitted to the exhibition. At the third meeting, held December 22, 1759, it was resolved to solicit the use of the great room of the Society of Arts, Manufactures and Commerce, and that object was effected by a letter, of which the following is a copy:

"London, Feb. 26, 1760.

"SIR,

"The artists of this city, having resolved to raise a sum for purposes of charity, by the annual exhibition of their works, entreat the Society to allow them the use of their room from the 7th of April to the 19th. This favour they consider as very important. The public concurrence of the Society will give to a new practice that countenance which novelty must always need; and the arts will gain dignity from the protection of those whom the world has already learned to respect.

"I am, etc.,

"F. HAYMAN, Chairman."

This letter enclosed the plan, to the purport already stated. The Society of Arts assented to the proposition generally, but objected to "that part of it which relates to the taking the shilling at the door," and to the period of exhibition, which is fixed to be from April 21st to May the 8th. Circular letters were sent to the artists, and the design was advertised by the Society of Arts, in the public papers, as follows:

"April 17, 1760.

The Society for the Encouragements of Arts, Manufactures, and Commerce, having given leave to the several masters in painting, sculpture, architecture, etc., to make a public exhibition of their works in the Society's great room, for the space of one fortnight, from the 21st instant, the said masters are hereby acquainted that nothing can be received after twelve o'clock on Saturday the 19th instant. The doors of the said room will be open from nine in the morning till two in the afternoon, after which time none but members of the Society, and those whom they may introduce, can be admitted.

By order of the Committee,

PETER TEMPLETON.

"The objection raised by the Society to taking money at the door of the exhibition, was removed by admitting the public gratis, and charging sixpence for each catalogue sold; and thus, through the kind aid of the Society of Arts, a thought that had its origin in Hogarth's liberality to the Foundling Hospital, launched British artists and their works from obscurity into the presence of the public."

"Of the number of visitors to the exhibition during the fortnight it was open there does not appear to be any record; but the curious reader may speculate as to its amount by imagining a number that saw it without catalogues and a number that economised by borrowing catalogues from each other; and by adding the amount of these two numbers to 6,582, the number of catalogues sold."

(I suppose that twenty would cover the number of 1760 catalogues now in existence. I know of about ten.)

"It has already been shown that when, on the 12th November, 1759, the general meeting resolved to establish annual exhibitions of their works, it also resolved to appropriate the profits to the formation of a fund for the protection of the superannuated; that a committee was appointed to give practical effect to these resolutions; and that other meetings, subsequently held, were all animated with the same spirit."

"But, from a continuation of the minutes of meetings held after the close of the first exhibition, it appears that the committee, instead of acting in deference to the resolutions of the previous general meetings, resolved, on the 15th of May, that "After the expenses of the exhibitions were defrayed, the balance should be applied to the advancement of the academy." And it appears that, at a general meeting held on the 23rd of May, 1760, it was resolved, in opposition to the resolution of the 12th of November, "That the money be applied towards the advancement of the arts; that time be taken to consider in what manner the money may be best applied for that purpose; but, when the general meeting has determined that point, the execution of it be wholly in the Committee."

"On the 7th of November, 1760, a general meeting resolved, "That the various sums of money they might accumulate be laid out in the funds, till they amount to £500, then to be disposed of by a vote of the majority of artists." Hence the community of British artists presents to view, at starting in its new career, that vacillation of purpose which indicates a total absence of all law and good government; and such was its position when George the Second died."

"On the 25th November, 1760, a second application was made by the artist's committee to the Society of Arts, etc., for the use of the great room, with a request that "the beginning of June, in the following year, might be the period of the exhibition," in order that the pictures of candidates to the Society of Arts for premiums might not be exhibited at the same time, the artists having, during their first exhibition, felt considerable annoyance from the imputations cast upon them for not having gained premiums for which they had not been candidates. "Great inconvenience having resulted from inferior people crowding the exhibition room last year," it was resolved, "That the price of the catalogue of the next exhibition be one shilling; that no person be admitted without one; and that it serve as a ticket for admission during the season."

"The letter sent to the Society of Arts on this occasion observed, that "the exhibition of last year was crowded and incommoded by the intrusion of persons whose stations and educations disqualified them from judging of statuary and painting, and who were made idle and tumultuous by the opportunity of attending a show." Notwithstanding this statement, and various explanations made on the part of the artists, the Society of Arts insisted that "the exhibition should be free and open to the public, at proper hours and under proper regulations."

"The artists having found it impossible to give practical effect to their own views whilst exhibiting their works under the control of the Society of Arts, entered into an agreement with an auctioneer for the use of his room, at Spring Gardens, during the month of May in the following year; and when George the Third ascended the throne, they had become so disturbed by ferments among themselves, produced by the want of unity of purpose, by anticipations that native talent was about to be cherished by royal patronage, and by other circumstances, that the spring of 1761 presents to view, amongst a variety of new features, the artists divided into two parties."

"In the spring of 1761, the divided artists displayed their works to the public in two exhibitions. The greater and more distinguished body at Spring Gardens, as the "Society of Artists of Great Britain," and the seceders, though few in number, were influenced by motives sufficiently important to draw others around them, and to make an attractive exhibition in the great room of the Society of Arts, in which the exhibition of 1760 had been made."

"The exhibitors at Spring Gardens proclaimed the appropriation of their revenue, by printing in their exhibition catalogue a design by Wale, engraved by Grignion, representing the Genius Sculpture, and Architecture, relieving the Distressed."

"And so far as the object of this exhibition was humanity, and the advancement of the interests of modern art, Hogarth afforded to it his powerful support."

"He contributed some of his works to it, and made two significant designs for its catalogue, which were engraved by Grignion. The frontispiece represents a fountain surmounted by a bust of George the Third. The water flowing from this royal fountain falls into a watering-pot held by Britannia, who directs its course to the nourishment of the roots of three young trees, the trunks of which are entwined, and respectively inscribed, "Painting," "Sculpture," "Architecture," emblematical of the confident hope entertained that native talent in art would be cherished by royal patronage."

"The second of these designs is a vignette printed at the end of the catalogue, emblematical of the contempt of the artists for the taste and judgment of the wealthy connoisseur or collector. It is expressed by a monkey fantastically dressed in the pink of the mode, holding an eye-glass in his right hand and in his left, a watering-pot, with which he nourishes the stumps of three old decayed trees, in three pots, on which are inscribed, "Obit 1502," "Obit 1600," "Obit 1604," with a label on the ground, on which is written "Exoticks."

"The advertisement of this exhibition was as follows:

Turk's Head, Gerard Street, Soho, March, 1761.

The Committee chosen by the body of artists who exhibited last year in the Society's rooms in the Strand, give notice that the exhibition for this year will be in May next, at the Great Room, Spring Gardens.

The artists of Great Britain and Ireland are desired to have their several performances ready by the 27th of April at farthest, in order that the catalogue may be out in time.

"F. M. NEWTON, Secretary.

"Catalogues one shilling each."

"On the 4th of June in this year, the exhibition was publicly illuminated in honour of the King's birthday.

"The committee prevailed on the artists to increase its number from sixteen to twenty-four, preserving the original relative proportion of professors of each department of art. The artists were now too happy in their new position to dream of insecurity, or of having anything to fear. But their committee, alive to the importance of the power it held, passed among themselves, unknown to the Society, the following resolutions: "That the arrangement or disposition of the several performances at all exhibitions should be absolutely left to the then subsisting committee. . . . That a President and Secretary to the Society should be chosen by themselves out of their own body. . . . That if any member of the committee should resign, the choice of another to fill the vacancy should be in themselves. And, lastly (by injunction), that the resolutions of the committee should be kept a profound secret from the Society, except when it was indispensably necessary to act otherwise." (Pye gives here the preface to the 1762 catalogue, which explains the following paragraph ; it is given later on, reprinted from the 1762 catalogue.)

"The sale by auction, at Langden's room, Covent Garden, having produced £122 15s. 4d. less than the value set on the pictures by the committee, that deficiency was paid to the artists. A few works sold for more than the value set upon them by the committee, but by far the greater part below that estimate. This plan appears to have been discontinued with the first experiment. The money received at the exhibition this year was £524 8s. 1d."

"The property of the Society not being secured to it by law, it was resolved on the 12th November, 1763, that the Society be enrolled; but on taking legal advice, it appeared that enrollment would not answer the purpose intended.

"Alarm now existed among the members of the Society; they could not imagine why the committee took so much pains to be continued in office, that ought to bring them nothing but trouble, if they had no views apart from the interests of the Society. Thus early the few acquired the power that properly belonged to the many; and, to increase it, they evinced at the exhibition partiality to those artists whose productions could excite neither envy nor fear of competition; thereby assuring to themselves a majority of votes at the elections. The receipt of the exhibition in 1763 was £560."

"In 1764 the apprehension by which the members were excited led them to offer, at general meetings, suggestions with a view to acquire security and confidence; but they were regularly opposed by the committee—always the same men. Continual opposition increased both suspicion and impatience.

"On the 24th January, 1764, a motion was made, at a general meeting, to solicit his Majesty to incorporate the Society by royal charter. The usual opposition of the committee was made, great excitement followed, which rendered the designs of the committee to shackle and subdue their brethren so evident, that when the President put the question, it was carried almost unanimously. In consequence, a committee to prepare the form of a charter was appointed. The receipt from the exhibition was £762 13s."

(1765.) "The charter was in substance almost a copy of the abstract of the proposed royal charter published in 1755 by the artists, when they endeavoured to found a Royal Academy on "general benevolence," and was granted on the 26th January, 1765.

"It left the number of the Society's members unlimited, and designates each member "Fellow," and each member of its government "Director." Various important points were left indefinite; but so long as the final settlement of questions of doubt or contest belonged to general meetings, no serious evil was to be apprehended on that account, as all such points could be settled by by-laws."

(In the Patronage of British Art, in a note on pages 116-120, is given the full text of the charter, but only the names of the first Directors and the list of members in 1765, is given below.)

"The first Directors (named in the charter) were George Lambert (president), Francis Hayman (vice-president), Richard Dalton (treasurer), F. M. Newton (secretary), J. M'Ardell, George Barrett, W. Chambers, W. Collins, F. Cotes, C. Grignion, J. Gwyn, N. Hone, J. Meyer, G. M. Moser, J. Payne, E. Penny, E. Rooker, P. Sandby, C. Seaton, W. Tyler, S. Wale, R. Wilson, G. Wilton, R. Yeo."

*(The first list of members was not printed alphabetically as they are here. Those marked * never exhibited at any of the exhibitions of the Society. Many of the names in Pye's list are misspelt, the proper spelling being here placed in brackets.)*

"The Society now, to conciliate, elected the late committee the first Directors under the charter. A code of by-laws was framed, and the form of an obligation, which each member was required to sign, was adopted. The receipt from the 1765 exhibition was £826 12s.

(1766.) "From this change of government, the artists derived but little advantage. The Directors became as despotic as ever; they objected to establish a public Academy, and the private one, in St. Martin's Lane, remained in its former languishing state; and the former complaints of partiality in the distribution of pictures at the exhibition were renewed. On the 3rd June, 1766, a general meeting resolved to take into consideration the low state of the academy in St. Martin's Lane, and to supply the deficiency out of the Society's funds. The receipt of the exhibition this year was £874 9s."

(In 1767 the dissensions between the Directors and the Fellows is fully described in Mr. Pye's book, but as the principal portion is given in Edwards's book, it is not necessary to print it here.)

"Mr. Woollett, the engraver, was, during many years, secretary to the Incorporated Society. He resigned about 1773, and was succeeded by Mr. John Hamilton, landscape painter. In 1774 Mr. Isaac Taylor, an engraver, succeeded Mr. Hamilton, and, consequently, he became possessed of the books and papers of the Society. On the death of Mr. Taylor on the 17th October, 1807 (aged seventy-seven), the Society having ceased to exist, its books and papers came into the hands of Mr. Charles Taylor, his son and executor, who transferred them, on the 22nd February, 1808, to the care of Mr. Robert Pollard, the last surviving member of that Society. In 1836 Mr. Pollard, aged eighty-one, gave up the documents of the Incorporated Society to the Royal Academy."

The following appears in "George the Third, his Court and Family," published in 1821, under date 1762, vol. i, page 285, note.

"The Nation can never be sufficiently grateful to the Society for the Encouragement of Arts, Sciences and Commerce, in the Adelphi, which dates from 1753, before His Majesty came to the Crown. This Society had proposed premiums, and had conferred bounties on pictures of merit, which brought into notice many rising artists in various branches; it had begun to excite attention in the public mind; it also accommodated the first exhibition with the use of its great room. It had, moreover, taken steps towards encouraging the art of engraving; yet the art of engraving in its more elevated branches as a national art, must be placed in the auspicious reign of George the Third; for not till then had the landscapes of Wilson been immortalized by the graver of Woollett, or the prints from British history after West, obtained circulation throughout the world. Wilson, and West, and Woollett were British artists, as were Strange and Hall, M'Ardell and Earlom; but we must not overlook the encouragement this art received from the patronage bestowed by His Majesty and the public on Bartolozzi, an Italian, or the popularity divided between that meritorious artist, the engraver, and his countryman and fellow-student Cipriani, the painter."

"The Graphic Arts felt equal encouragement, and it must be acknowledged that they received, if not a being, yet a character and an establishment in the reign of his late Majesty, who gave first of all a charter of incorporation to a society of artists (dated January, 1765), whose exhibitions had begun in 1760. The royal bounty presented them with an annual donation of one hundred pounds. The Royal Academy was instituted some years afterwards. Those only who recollect the degraded state of the arts before the year 1760 can properly appreciate the advantages derived from these institutions. It is true, that Pope complimented Jervais, as bestowing immortality by his pencil; but who now quotes as excellent a picture by Jervais? And though Hudson had much business as a portrait painter, yet, to speak without undue partiality, the arts are under much greater obligations to him for bringing forward a number of pupils superior to himself, than for any, or for all, of his performances. There was no such thing as an English school of art at that time, and foreigners (Vanloo may be cited as an instance) were thought men of superior talents, because our own artists had no reputation for talents at all. If the reader now distinguishes in our public exhibitions portraits that compete with the best works of Vandyke, and historical pieces not unworthy of the noblest times of Italy, let him acknowledge that these partake of the nature of novelties among us, and are not of long standing in the British School."

From the same, page 286:

"About the year 1753, Mr. Sandby, and several other members of an academy who met at what had previously been Roubilliac's workshop in St. Martin's Lane, wishing to extend their plan, and establish a Society on a broader basis, held several meetings for the purpose of making new regulations, etc. Concerning these regulations it may naturally be supposed there were a variety of opinions; but Hogarth, who was one of the members, and who deservedly held a very high rank in the arts, disapproved of the whole scheme, and wished the Society to remain as it was. He thought that enlarging the number of students would induce a crowd of young men to quit more profitable pursuits, neglect what might be more suitable to their talents, and introduce to the practice of the arts more professors than the arts would support. This naturally involved him in many disputes with his brother artists; and as these disputes were not always conducted with philosophic calmness, the satirist sometimes said things that his opponents deemed rather too severe for the occasion. On the publication of his "Analysis of Beauty" they recriminated with interest. Among the prints which were then published to ridicule his system (the line of beauty, etc.) are six or eight that from the manner in which they are conceived, and the uncommon spirit with which they are etched, carry more than probable marks of the burin of Mr. Sandby, who was then a very young man, but has since declared, that if he had known Mr. Hogarth's merit then, as well as he has done since, he would on no account have drawn a line which might tend to his dispraise. Hogarth, no doubt, expected to take the lead in an affair of this kind; but he was disappointed, and Reynolds became the president, as detailed in a masterly manner in Northcote's Memoirs of that celebrated painter, which renders further particulars here unnecessary."

(According to the catalogues Reynolds was never President of the Society of Artists, neither does there seem to have been one printed with the names of the officers until 1772, when James Paine is printed as President and J. Mortimer as Vice-President; until this year the letters F.S.A. were never used in the catalogues.)

The following is a note in Northcote's "Life of Sir Joshua Reynolds," vol. i, page 83, note:

"In an account of the rise of the arts, or the encouragement given to them in this country, at the time when Reynolds was fast advancing towards the attainment of fame, it may not be unsuitable to mention what all preceding biographers have passed over, the liberality of the Duke of Richmond. The following is a copy of an advertisement which was published in the weekly papers during 1758 and 1759:

"For the use of those who study
Painting, Sculpture, and Engraving, will be opened on Monday, the 6th of March next, at His Grace the Duke of Richmond's,
In White Hall,

A room containing a large collection of original plaister casts from the best antique statues and busts which are now at Rome and Florence.

"It is imagined that the study of these most exact copies from antiques may greatly contribute towards giving young beginners of genius an early taste and idea of beauty and proportion, which, when thoroughly acquired, will, in time, appear in their several performances."

"The public is therefore advertised, that any known painter, sculptor, carver, or other settled artist, to whom the study of these gessos may be of use, shall have the liberty to draw or model from any of them at any time; and upon application to the person that has the care of them, any particular figure shall be placed in such light as the artist shall desire."

"And likewise, any young man or boy, above the age of twelve years, may also have the same liberty, by a recommendation from any known artist to Mr. Wilton, sculptor, in Hedge Lane."

"For these young persons, a fresh statue or bust will be set once a week or fortnight in a proper light for them to draw from."

"They will only be admitted from the hour of nine to eleven in the morning, and from the hour of two to four in the afternoon."

"On Saturday, Messrs. Wilton and Cipriani will attend to see what progress each has made, to correct their drawings and models, and give them such instruction as shall be thought necessary."

"Nobody is to touch any of the gessos upon any account, or to move them out of their places, or draw upon either them, their pedestals, or the walls of the room; any person offending in such a manner will be dismissed, and never admitted again upon any consideration."

"There will be given, at Christmas and Midsummer, annually, to those who distinguish themselves by making the greatest progress, the following premiums:"

"A figure will be selected from the rest, and a large silver medal will be given for the best design of it, and another for the best model in basso-relievo."

"A smaller silver medal for the second best design, and one for the second best basso relievo."

"The servant who takes care of the room has strict orders not to receive any money. It is therefore hoped and expected that none will be offered."—

London Chronicle, Feb. 25, 1758.

"(1764.) This extended and ample exhibition at Spring Gardens had, however, originated from the union of all the artists in the metropolis, as before noticed, in the year 1760; and the success of their exhibitions having given them sufficient encouragement, they now also seriously proposed to incorporate themselves, and accordingly drew up a plan of a charter, at that time, which was granted to them in the following year. It may not be foreign to my purpose, for the information of general readers, to take some notice of the royal charter of incorporation of this establishment, particularly as it has been entirely passed over by former biographers."

"This charter then was given to the "Society of Artists of Great Britain," to consist of a President, Vice-President, Directors and Fellows, to be for ever after a body corporate, with perpetual succession, and with power to enjoy lands in perpetuity, either by purchase or devise, to the yearly value of £1,000, notwithstanding the statute of mortmain. Their arms, or corporation seal, consisted of azure, a brush, a chissel, and a pair of compasses, composed fretty, or; over these, in chief, a regal crown proper. This coat had two supporters: on the dexter side Britannia; on the sinister, Concord. The crest was on a wreath, an oak branch, and a palm branch in saltire, and in the centre of these, a chaplet of laurel. This common seal too, a thing very unusual in heraldic grants, they had liberty to break, alter, or change the same, from time to time as they thought fit."

"It was further stipulated, that all the officers, together with the Directors, should be either painters, sculptors, architects, or engravers, by profession. The charter further authorized them to hold meetings for the better improvement of those arts, in London, or within ten miles thereof, as often as might be necessary."

"As the events which gave rise to this establishment are intimately connected with the present Royal Academy, in its progress and foundation, I cannot give a better view of them in part, than is afforded by the slight sketch, drawn up in the year 1766, by Mr. John Gwyn, an ingenious architectural writer, in his 'London and Westminster Improved.'

"He observes that Sir Peter Lely and Sir Godfrey Kneller kept up the national passion with great success; and some public works, which required decorations, gave opportunity to Sir James Thornhill and others, to shew that historical painting, if properly encouraged, was a field in which the British nation might engage with their competitors, not without advantage; but notwithstanding this advancement of the art of painting, and the number of ingenious professors who continually advanced in every branch, neither painting, nor professors of painting, were known, distinguished, or encouraged. The few, indeed, who had taste and discernment, sought for these ingenious men, and purchased their works; but the public knew them not, nor did they know each other; they had no society or intercourse with their fellow artists, consequently had very little to say in each other's recommendation, in the different branches of painting; and he who had the greatest acquaintance, whatever were his abilities, was sure to get the most money. However, the natural good sense and ingenuity of the British Nation continued still to furnish very able masters; and these, at length, collected their scattered and dispersed brethren, and formed a little society, who, wisely considering their mutual interest, by a voluntary subscription among themselves, established an academy in St. Martin's-lane."

"The establishment of the Foundling Hospital,*which was a national concern, and attracted the notice of the public in a very particular manner, gave an opportunity, when finished, for displaying a scene entirely new to this nation. The Hospital was just in its infancy, and elegant decorations, and every possible means that could allure or draw the attention of the public towards its support and maintenance, were found necessary; but the expense of such ornaments could not be afforded by a charity whose utmost abilities were demanded for the succour and support of deserted perishing infants. In order to contribute to the support of this useful establishment, and to shew at once that ingenuity and compassion for the distresses of human nature are usually found to reside in the same person, the most considerable artists of Great Britain nobly and generously united in bestowing a great number of excellent performances, in painting and sculpture, which embellished the Hospital, entertained the public, and at the same time convinced the world that painting was arrived to a degree of perfection in this kingdom, of which, until this era, they had no conception. The Governors of the Hospital, convinced of the use and benefit which accrued to the charity from these truly valuable donations, and desirous of improving a connection so very advantageous to them, encouraged the several contributors, and also the whole body of those who professed the polite arts, to have an annual meeting at the Hospital, on the fifth of November: these meetings drew together the most ingenious artists from every quarter, and at one of them it was proposed to the whole body, to have an annual exhibition of such performances as should be judged worthy the notice of the public."

"A proposal so very advantageous to merit of every kind, could not fail of being received with applause, and was unanimously agreed to. In consequence of this resolution, application was made to the Society of Arts, Manufactures and Commerce, who, taking it into consideration, rightly judged, that an exhibition of this nature could not be carried into execution with so much propriety as under their patronage; they complied, therefore, willingly, with this request, and in the year 1760, the first exhibition of the artists of Great Britain was made, and another the year following; but as every member of the Society was at liberty to distribute what number of tickets for admittance he thought fit, that which was intended only as a polite entertainment and rational amusement for the public, became a scene of tumult and disorder; and to such a height was the rage of visiting the exhibition carried, that, when the members themselves had satisfied their own curiosity, the room was crowded, during the hours allotted for the exhibition, with menial servants and their acquaintance."

"This prostitution of the polite arts undoubtedly became extremely disagreeable to the professors themselves, who heard, alike, with indignation, their works censured or approved by kitchen-maids and stable-boys; but the cause of the final separation (for this abuse might have been remedied) of the artists of Great Britain from the Society, was this: it had been, and still is, usual for the Society to give premiums for historical and landscape painting; these rewards were usually adjudged among the competitors some little time before the exhibition began, and as those who gained the premiums were obliged to leave their pictures a limited time with the Society, they were of course sure to be in the exhibition."

"The great inconvenience of this method of proceeding was soon discovered by several of the most eminent painters, whose reputations were already so eminently established as to prevent their becoming candidates for a trifling premium; these therefore, as their characters were so nearly concerned, very justly objected to the continuation of this custom, for the following obvious reason; it was generally known that the Society had determined premiums for several pictures, and it was natural enough for persons who knew nothing of the matter to enquire, upon entering the room, which of the pieces, among that profusion of art, were those that had obtained the premium? and, being satisfied in this particular, they very innocently concluded, for want of better judgement, that these had obtained the prize from all the rest, and consequently were the best pictures. Had it been possible to have confined this injurious decision to the vulgar spectators, it would have been a thing of no consequence; but, unfortunately for the arts, many in a much higher sphere of life were liable to be led away by the same opinion; and therefore, as the Society would not give up the point, a separation ensued, and every succeeding exhibition has been made at the room in Spring Gardens. The prodigious encouragement given to it, and the applause bestowed on the several performances, by persons of the greatest taste and distinction, evidently shew what a prodigious progress has been made in the arts, as well as what great expectations may be formed of what will probably be done by concurring incitements of applause and emulation, and the effects of society and concord. The success of the exhibition, and the harmony which subsisted among the exhibitors, naturally led them to the thoughts of soliciting an establishment, and forming themselves into a body; in consequence of which solicitation, his Majesty was most graciously pleased to grant them his Royal Charter, incorporating them by the name of the Society of Artists of Great Britain; which charter bears date the 26th day of January, 1765, and is the one of which I have given the preceding sketch."

EXTRACTS FROM THE CATALOGUES OF THE SOCIETY OF ARTISTS AND OTHER SOURCES.

The first catalogue, in 1760, is smaller than those that followed, the title-page being: "A Catalogue of the Pictures, Sculptures, Models, Drawings, Prints, &c., of the Present Artists, Exhibited in the Great Room of the Society for the Encouragement of Arts, Manufactures, and Commerce on the 21st of April 1760." The motto is, "Esse quid hoc dicam?—vivis quod Fama negatur!—Mart."

[Price Six pence.]

This catalogue contains the description of 130 works, divided into three sections: Pictures, 1 to 74; Sculptures, Models, and Engravings, 75-107; and Drawings, Engravings on Copper, 108-130. The word Engravings in the second section applies to Gem Engravers and Medallists, and the Engravers on Copper in the third section include Macardel, Frye, Canot, Ravenet, Strange, and Woollet.

1761.

The second catalogue has the following title: "A CATALOGUE of the Pictures, Sculptures, Models, Drawings, Prints, &c., Exhibited by the SOCIETY OF ARTISTS of Great Britain at the Great Room in Spring Garden, Charing Cross,

May 9th, 1761.

(Being the second Year of their Exhibition.)

PRICE ONE SHILLING."

For this catalogue William Hogarth made two designs, both of which were engraved by C. Grignion and "Published according to Act of Parliament, May 7, 1761." The first is used as the frontispiece, and represents Britannia watering three young trees inscribed "Painting, Sculpture, and Architecture" out of a can which receives the water from a fountain surmounted by a bust of George III. The second forms the tail-piece and represents a monkey dressed as a dandy watering three dead trees in pots labelled 1502, 1600, and 1604. The third illustration forms a heading to the first page; it is also engraved by C. Grignion after a drawing by Samuel Wale, afterwards R.A. The subject is "The Genius of Painting, Sculpture, and Architecture, relieving the distressed." The drawing was exhibited the same year, No. 130.

My catalogue is one that belonged to Horace Walpole, and he made the following notes in it: "N.B. The first Exhibition of the Artists was at the Great Room of the Society of Arts, &c., in 1760," and on the title-page: "Incorporated by Charter—26 Jan^y, 1765."

The third exhibition opened on May 17th, 1762, and the catalogue has a frontispiece, with a design by S. Wale engraved by C. Grignion. The subject is an angel or winged figure presenting a basket of fruit to Britannia, who is seated, surrounded by a trophy of flags, cannon, drum, etc., with the three small trees that were introduced by Hogarth in the 1761 catalogue. The motto underneath is "Aurea si Tuleris Minora Feres.—Mart." The title-page of the exhibition catalogue is engraved on the same plate instead of being printed from type as in the first two catalogues. There is no price on it. In this catalogue is a "PREFACE," to which Walpole has added in my copy, "By Samuel Johnson, LL.D.;" it is as follows:

"The public may justly require to be inform'd of the nature and extent of every design, for which the favour of the public is openly solicited. The Artists, who were themselves the first projectors of an Exhibition in this nation, and who have now contributed to the following catalogue, think it therefore necessary to explain their purpose, and justify their conduct. An Exhibition of the works of art, being a spectacle new in this Kingdom, has rais'd various opinions and conjectures among those, who are unacquainted with the practice in foreign nations; those, who set out their performances to general view, have been too often consider'd as rivals of each other, as men actuated, if not by avarice, at least by vanity, and contending for superiority of fame, tho' not for a pecuniary prize. It cannot be denied or doubted, that all who offer themselves to criticism are desirous of praise; this desire is not only innocent but virtuous, while it is undebased by artifice and unpolluted by envy; and of envy or artifice these men can never be accused, who, already enjoying all the honours and profits of their profession, are content to stand candidates for public notice, with genius yet unexperienced, and diligence yet unrewarded; who, without any hope of encreasing their own reputation or interest, expose their names and their works only that they may furnish an opportunity of appearance to the young, and diffident, and the neglected. The purpose of this Exhibition is not to enrich the Artists, but to advance the Art; the eminent are not flatter'd with preference, nor the obscure insulted with contempt; whoever hopes to deserve public favour is here invited to display his merit.

"Of the price put upon this Exhibition some account may be demanded.

Whoever sets his work to be shewn, naturally desires a multitude of spectators, but his desire defeats his own end, when spectators assemble in such numbers as to obstruct one another. Tho' we are far from wishing to diminish the pleasures, or depreciate the sentiments of any class of the community, we know, however, what every one knows, that all cannot be judges or purchasers of works of art; yet we have already found by experience, that all are desirous to see an Exhibition. When the terms of admission were low, our room was throng'd with such multitudes as made access dangerous, and frightened away those, whose approbation was most desired.

"Yet, because it is seldom believed that money is got but for the love of money, we shall tell the use which we intend to make of our expected profits. Many artists of great abilities are unable to sell their works for their due price; to remove this inconvenience, an annual sale will be appointed, to which every man may send his works, and send them if he will without his name. These works will be review'd by the committee that conduct the Exhibition. A price will be secretly set on every piece, and register'd by the Secretary. If the piece is sold for more, the whole price shall be the artist's, but if the purchasers value it at less than the committee, the artist shall be paid the deficiency from the profits of the Exhibition."

The fourth exhibition opened on May 14th, 1763, with the same wording on the title-page, except as regards the motto, for which is substituted: "Non est vates inglorius, nisi in sua patria.—Evang. Matt. chap. xiii, v. 57." There is no price on the catalogue.

1764.

The fifth exhibition opened on April 9th, 1764, with a similar title-page and no price, the motto is now: "Hic Saxo, liquidis ille coloribus solers, nunc Hominem ponere, nunc Deum.—Hor." 1765.

The sixth exhibition opened on April 23rd, 1765, with a similar title-page, the motto being: "—— qui Vitam excoluere per artes.—Virg. Æneid 6"; and for the first time: "Printed for the Society by William Bunce, Russell Street, Covent Garden."

At the heading of the catalogue is: "Note. Those marked thus * are to be disposed of." This is continued afterwards.

My catalogue of this year has Walpole's notes in it.

1766.

The seventh exhibition opened April 21st, 1766, with a similar title-page and the same printer's name; the motto is: "Tua, Cæsar, ætas, Janum Quirini clausit, Et veteres revocavit artes.—Hor." 1767.

The eighth exhibition has a similar title-page and no motto, and opened on April 22nd, 1767; for the first time appears: "Incorporated by His Majesty's Royal Charter."

My catalogue of this year contains Walpole's notes.

1768.

The ninth exhibition has a similar title-page and no motto, and opened on April 28th, 1768.

A note appears in manuscript in the British Museum catalogue that "The Exhibition will end this evening, May 27, 1768."

In this year was published a pamphlet of "Critical observations on the pictures which are now exhibiting, &c.," printed for J. Murdoch, opposite the New Exchange Coffee House in the Strand; the preface is as follows:

"As our readers may possibly be at a loss to know, why a great many of the articles in the Catalogue are passed over without any notice; it is proper to acquaint them, that such articles are, in general, either too trifling for criticism, or placed in the classes of Sculptures, Designs in Architecture, Models, Drawings, &c., none of which come under our plan of observation."

1768 (Special).

On September 30th, 1768, a second exhibition was held in honour of the King of Denmark. The catalogue is very scarce. I have only seen two, one in the Anderdon collection in the British Museum, and the other in the National Portrait Gallery. The title-page is as follows: "A catalogue of the Pictures, Sculptures, Designs in Architecture, Models, Drawings, Prints, &c., which the Society of Artists of Great Britain have the Honour to Exhibit to His Majesty the King of Denmark, at their Room in Spring-Garden, September the thirtieth, 1768."

(There is a note in the British Museum copy: "N.B. This catalogue may be the only record of this effort of the Artists to do honor to Denmark.")

The exhibition consisted of 225 works.

The following is from "George the Third, his Court and Family," under date 1768, vol. i, page 345:

"During the summer the King of Denmark paid a visit to this country, in which he displayed much folly, but met with very little personal approval from his royal brother-in-law, though treated with all the splendour of regal magnificence. His table alone was served, exclusive of wines, at the rate of £84 per day; and the City of London, and other public bodies, gave him numerous fêtes.

The King of Denmark's visit to England, indeed, placed His Majesty, personally, in a very awkward situation, but in which he conducted himself with much good sense and delicacy. It cannot be doubted but that he was fully apprised of the unpleasant circumstances of his sister, Caroline Matilda, at the Danish Court, from the machinations of an ambitious stepmother, and also the King her husband's culpable neglect and forbearance. This, in fact, was the true and just motive of the cold reception which the Danish King met with at St. James's, and of His Majesty's procrastination in receiving at his palace of Richmond the first visit of this royal guest. The late Princess Dowager of Wales was also equally well informed and displeased on account of the illiberal and unmerited slights her daughter had so often met with from the Queen Dowager and her son, Prince Frederick, and she despised that king for his tame submission and pusillanimity. Notwithstanding all this, His Majesty, willing to show to royalty the exterior marks of distinction which sovereigns mutually expect from each other, intimated to the Royal Family, to his ministers, and the great officers of state, that he should consider as a respectful attention paid to himself, the emulation of the nobility in procuring the King of Denmark whatever was conducive to his amusement and information in this kingdom. Indeed that young Monarch received the most distinguished honours from an hospitable and magnificent court, in a continued succession of the most brilliant feasts, and the most sumptuous entertainments. His Majesty himself concluded all these festivities in a princely manner, by giving to the Danish monarch a grand ball and supper at the Queen's Palace; but though the king, out of compliment to him, went to his superb masqued ball at the Opera House, yet he did not mix in the motley throng, but merely sat for some time in a private and secluded box, where he could quietly view the folly and bustle of the scene, etc."

"Thursday, August 11, 1768. His Majesty the King of Denmark arrived at St. James's. His retinue consisted of four post-chaises and fifteen servants on horseback. The coaches of the household, which had been sent to Dover to escort His Majesty, were all left behind, his Majesty choosing to travel in post-chaises for the sake of expedition, and to avoid ceremony. He was immediately waited upon by the Earl of Hertford and Lord Falmouth, who complimented him on his arrival. His Majesty is not yet twenty, being born June 2, 1749. His daily expenses are computed at £1,000, which he defrays himself."—Gentleman's Magazine, 1768, page 395.

"After visiting Cambridge, Oxford, York, and Windsor, etc., he was presented with the freedom of the City of London, and on Oct. 10th he gave a most superb masked ball at the Haymarket, at which about 2,500 persons of distinction were present, etc."—Gentleman's Magazine page 491.

"October 14th. His Danish Majesty embarked on board the Mary Yatcht at Dover, and about 11 in the morning set sail."—Gentleman's Magazine, 1768, page 492.

1769.

The tenth exhibition opened on May 1st, 1769, the title-page being the same as the preceding one.

1770.

The eleventh exhibition opened on April 16, 1770, the title-page being the same, excepting that no printer's name is given, only "Printed for the Society." At the head of the catalogue is printed, "The public are desired to take Notice, that the Numbers and Prices of such Performances as are to be disposed of, are left with the Assistant Secretary, who attends at the Room."

1771.

"The twelfth exhibition opened on April 26th, 1771. The title-page is similar to the previous ones, but this year a motto reappears: "Explorant adversa viros: perque aspera duro nititur ad laudem virtus interrita clivo.—Silius Ital."

A similar notice appears at the head of the catalogue, with the name of "Mr. Miles" instead of "the assistant."

The following notices also appear: "The Society of Artists of Great Britain, take the present Opportunity of acquainting the PUBLIC, that this is the last Exhibition they shall have at the Room they now occupy, in SPRING GARDENS, having purchased a Plot of Ground, in a situation more commodious and central to the Inhabitants of this great Metropolis, on which to erect an ACADEMY, EXHIBITION-ROOM, &c., and with which the PUBLIC shall in due Time be made acquainted."

"THE ARTISTS who exhibit with this SOCIETY, will please to excuse the Omission of Geometrical Plans in this Catalogue, as there was an absolute Necessity of excluding all such, for want of Room, through the great Number of other Performances sent for Exhibition."

1772.

The thirteenth exhibition opened on May 13, 1772. The title-page has several variations such as "Exhibited at their NEW ROOM near Exeter Exchange, Strand," and "Printed by Harriot Bunce, Printer to the Society." She was probably the widow of William Bunce, carrying on his printing business. The motto is "Tantus amor laudum, tantæ est Victoria curæ.—Virg." 1773.

The fourteenth exhibition opened on April 29th, 1773. The title-page is the same as before, but the motto is:

Pascitur in vivis livor, post fata quiescit
Tunc suus ex merito quemque tuetur honor.—Ovid.

Before the opening of the exhibition in this year a full list of the members was printed. It is undated, but a reference to the President (G. Stubbs), and the Treasurer (David Martin) in the catalogues proves that it must have been printed between the close of the 1772 exhibition, and the opening of that of 1773.

In the above list of 130 Fellows of the Society of Artists those marked † (thirty in number) never exhibited again after their election. Those marked ‡ never exhibited at all, and William Collins never had F.S.A. put after his name in the catalogues. Out of the thirty, only seven went over to the Royal Academy, viz., John Donowell (1778-1786), Rev. Mr. Gyles (1773-1774), Ozias Humphry, R.A. (1779-1797), A. Nelson (1790), William Parry, A.R.A. (1776-1788), Richard Paton (1776-1780), Trotter, T. (1780-1801).

easily disengage himself at this approaching Exhibition at other places. We have no law . . . (here it ends.) 1774.

The fifteenth exhibition opened on April 25th, 1774. The title is the same as before, the motto being:

Quare agite, O juvenes, placido quos sydere natos

Paciferæ studia allectant tranquilla Minervæ:

Quosque suo fovet igne, fibique optavit Alumnos!

F. de Arte Graph.

1775.

The sixteenth exhibition opened on April 25th, 1775. The title-page is somewhat different, the "New Room" is altered to "Academy" near Exeter Exchange, the motto is Scite Chrysippus, ut multa, "Qui stadium, inquit, currit, eniti et contendere debet, quam maxime possit, ut vincat: supplantare cum, quicum certet, aut manu depellere, nullo modo debet."

—CICERO, de Officiis.

This year the arms of the Society appear on the catalogue for the first time, and the printer's inscription is London, Printed by W. Hay, Printer to the Royal Incorporated Society of Artists of Great Britain.

A letter (much torn, in my possession,) was written by six members of the Society, dated London, Feb^y 10th, 1775, to Monsieur George Romney to . . . Inglese . . . de Spagne Roma—and altered to . . . the British Consul, Venice,—as follows:

"SIR,

We the Committee of correspondence appointed by the incorporated Society of Artists of Great Britain, with pleasure inform you that the difficulties we have hitherto labour'd under are happily at an end; that peace and harmony are perfectly restored among us.

That the Society have made good their first payment with their creditors, at the close of the last Exhibition, and by the most moderate Estimate, find, they shall be able to discharge the whole arrears, by Rents, and Profit of three succeeding Exhibitions, when we shall make a saving between six and seven hundred Pounds per Annum, and have the satisfaction of being Posses'd of the best Exhibition Room in the Kingdom.

There is the greatest unanimity and spirit in the Society all the principal Members have Voluntarily enter'd into an obligation for the support of the Society's Credit, binding themselves in the penalty of an hundred pounds to Exhibit to their utmost till the debts incurred by the building are discharged.

Notwithstanding the absence of many of our Valuable Exhibitors, and the difficulties we then labour'd under, we can with confidence affirm, we made a very respectable show.

The Society has enter'd into a resolution to purchase Frames of different sizes, to accommodate those Exhibitors who are unprovided.

The Exhibitions in future will open on the 23rd of April, and we are desired to request you will forward to us as soon as possible such of your works as you intend for Exhibition.

Among many regulations for securing the peace and concord of the Society, a Law has Pass'd, that no President shall hold their chair for two successive years, but may be elected the third.

Peace being restored, our Property secured, in the quiet Possession of our Estate, and having the addition of several Valuable Fellows, Viz., Messrs. Brompton, Tate, Sykes, &c., and with the assistance of Your works, doubt not but we shall make a very Capital Exhibition, and you may depend on the greatest care and attention to arrange them to the best advantage.

We are, Sir,

Your very humble serv^{ts}

JNO. MORTIMER.

S. GILPIN.

JOHN DIXON.

F. WHEATLEY.

JOHN SMART.

WM. MARLOW.

Mr. Mortimer (at Miss Hand's, Norfolk Street, Strand), is President for this year, Mr. Tassaert (George Street, Hanover Square), V. President, Mr. Martin (Dean Street, Soho), Treasurer, Mr. Isaac Taylor (Holborn), Secretary. What Pictures you consign for Exhibition may be addressed to any of the Society's officers, of whom Mr. Tassaert is best acquainted with the Custom House business."

(Mr. Romney did not send any picture after all.)

1776.

The seventeenth exhibition opened on April 18th, 1776. The title-page is similar to the last and "Royal Incorporated" Society added, and with "Printed by order of the Society." The motto is:

Sed juxta Antiquos Naturam, imitabere pulchram
Qualem forma rei Propria, Objectum requirit.

Fresnoy.

1777.

The eighteenth exhibition opened on April 28th, 1777. There are several variations in the title-page. It was held at Mr. Philips's New Great Room In Piccadilly near Air Street, and was Printed for the Society by T. Bensley, No. 2, Swan Yard, Strand. The motto is:

Neque cuiquam tam statim clarum ingenium est, ut possit emergere: nisi illi materia, occasio, fautor etiam, commendatorque contingat.—Plin. Epist.

The nineteenth exhibition opened on April 24th, 1778. The title-page is similar to the last. The motto was:

Inventas—Vitam excoluere per artes.—Virgil.

The prices are left with Mrs. Dean instead of Mr. Miles.

1779.

There was no exhibition at all this year.

1780.

The twentieth exhibition opened on April 15th, 1780. The title is somewhat varied from those preceding it.

Exhibited by the Society of Artists of Great Britain instituted
by His Majesty's Royal Charter January 26, 1765 at their Great Room in Spring Gardens.

The motto is the same as that for the year 1776, and the printer is J. Dixwell No. 148, St. Martin's Lane, Charing Cross.

The prices may be known by applying to Mrs. Flannagan, &c.

1781, 1782.

There were no exhibitions in these years.

1783.

The twenty-first exhibition opened April 28th, 1783, at their Great Room, near Exeter Exchange. The title-page otherwise is similar to the last. The motto was:

Sæpe verecundum Laudasti :
—Vitæ me redde priori.

Hor.

Printed by order of the Society.

The Prices may be known by applying to Mrs. Charlewood, &c.

1784 to 1789.

There were no exhibitions in these years.

1790.

The twenty-second exhibition was opened May 1st, 1790 at their old Room, now called the Lyceum near Exeter Exchange, Strand, otherwise the title-page is similar. The motto is:

Monos alit artes, Omnesque incenduntur ad Studia Gloria.

Cicero.

There was a Preface to this exhibition as follows:

"After having been withdrawn several years from public notice, the Society of Artists, instituted by Royal Charter, again offer themselves to view, by a renewal of their annual Exhibitions. It is, nevertheless, under many disadvantages that they now appear as candidates for public favour. They have suffered much from every kind of opposition; from reports industriously circulated to the injury of their labours, from pretended friends, as well as from those who were not believed to favour the Society with their good wishes; but the indulgent eye will consider the present as the first effort of a recovery to increasing health and vigour. A Subscription being determined, among several Fellows of the Society, to be paid yearly, to defray the contingent expenses attending an Exhibition of their works, Artists who may in future be inclined to join them, may depend on its being continued regularly on every return of the present season. The concerns of the Society will now be placed on the most liberal and equal footing; and whatever fund may hereafter arise to them, will be jointly the property of all the exhibiting members; for which reason no new Fellows will be elected, but persons of the most approved merit in their several professions. The present trial will discover who is with, and who is against us; after which a new list will be printed, and such regulations appointed as may add dignity as well as permanency to the institution.

The Society also beg leave to declare in this place, that they have resolved on opening an Academy during the next winter, for the study of drawing from the life, and to afford other encouragements to promote superior performances in the arts, of which due notice will be given by advertisement. In this Academy, Lectures will be delivered by Professors appointed for that purpose, where Gentlemen and Ladies, as well as Students intended for the profession, may receive the rudiments of knowledge and taste in the several branches of art, and in the elegant circumstances of life dependant on their studies.

The present display of art is now submitted to inspection, in the humble hope that it is not entirely unworthy the public attention. It, doubtless, contains several excellent performances, and many that would never, otherwise, have been viewed, except in private collections; but a treat still more various, they have reason to believe, they shall offer in their next Exhibition.

A few of the works of the late Mr. Robertson are introduced here, at the desire of several friends, as he was a Member and President of this Society, and because they were originally intended for exhibition."

"Such Performances as are to be disposed of, are marked *."

1791.

The twenty-third (and last) exhibition catalogue has no date of opening on the title-page, and no address where the exhibition was held.

The motto was:

Omnes tacito quodam Sensu sine ullâ Arte, aut Ratione, quæ sint in Artibus ac Rationibus prava aut recta dijudicant.—CICERO de ORAT. Lib. III.

Gentlemen desirous of purchasing any of the Performances, may know the Particulars of such as are to be disposed of by enquiring at the Bar.

AN ACCOUNT OF THE
FREE SOCIETY OF ARTISTS

COMPILED FROM “ANECDOTES OF PAINTERS”

BY EDWARD EDWARDS, A.R.A.

AND “PATRONAGE OF BRITISH ART”

BY JOHN PYE
AND THE CATALOGUES THEMSELVES

THE FREE SOCIETY OF ARTISTS

THE following extracts are mostly from John Pye's "Patronage of British Art," to which are added any notices in the catalogues themselves that may serve to show the progress and decay of this smaller society.

"Thus, two annual exhibitions having been established in London, the contributors to them dated the existence of that to which each respectively belonged, from the parent exhibition of 1760."

(In reality the 1760 Exhibition should belong to the Free Society—as the future members of the "Society of Artists" were the seceders, leaving the main body exhibiting at the same place as before. As, however, the 1760 catalogue has always been considered as belonging to the Society of Artists, I have in the Dictionary of Exhibitors adopted that course, commencing the Free Society with 1761.)

"The advertisement of this exhibition was as follows:

"Office of the Society for the Encouragement of Arts, &c., April 1761.

"Notice is hereby given, that tickets for the exhibition will be delivered at the Secretary's office, in the Strand, to the members, or their order in writing, every evening between the hours of six and nine.

Any member may make one ticket serve for any number of persons, by specifying the number under his hand on the back of the ticket. The tickets are for the admission of persons from seven in the morning till one in the afternoon.

From one till two the room will be shut up.

From two o'clock none but members, or such as they bring with them, will be admitted; and the room will be shut again every evening at seven."

"The public were admitted gratuitously by tickets."

The price of a catalogue (when required) was sixpence, to which is prefixed an announcement, of which the following is a copy:

"N.B. The money arising from the sale of these catalogues will be given by the Artists immediately after the Exhibition to some public charity.

CATALOGUE

OF THE

Paintings, Sculptures, Models, Drawings,

Engravings, &c.

Now exhibiting in the Great Room belonging to the Society for the Encouragement of

ARTS, MANUFACTURES, and COMMERCE

In the Strand

London

Printed by William Griffin, in Fetter Lane Holborn

MD.CC.LXI.

Inside the catalogue is:

"Note. Those pictures mark'd thus * were candidates for the Premiums, given for Historical and Landscape paintings; all the others are here for Public Exhibition only."

"The exhibition produced, after all its expenses were paid, upwards of £150; which was appropriated in benefactions as follows: To Middlesex Hospital £50. To the British Lying-in Hospital £50. To the Asylum for Female Orphans £50, and the balance to poor artists."

The money was handed in to the two first hospitals by Messrs. R. Pine, James Basire, Gabriel Mathias, Jerad Leigh, and William Bellars, and to the last by Mr. Devis, who was elected a perpetual governor.

In the 1762 catalogue the title-page is the same, with, on the other side:

"N.B. The money arising from the sale of the catalogues will be wholly applied, by the Exhibitors, to the Relief of distressed Artists, or their Widows and Children."

There is no printer's name.

"The exhibitors in the Strand this year constituted themselves into a regularly organised Society, under the name of 'The Society of Artists associated for the Relief of Distressed Brethren, their Widows and Orphans', to be supported by annual exhibitions of their works."

They issued to the public a printed prospectus, headed—

"THE ORIGINAL PLAN OF THE ARTISTS' SOCIETY.

"It is well known there is scarce a profession or business that has not, by prudent foresight and economy, established certain funds for the support of the distressed and decayed of their own number, when more public provision has been wanting.

The professors of painting, sculpture and architecture, which hold the first rank among the arts in the ornaments and beauties of life, are almost the only body who, through that inattention incident to men of genius, are destitute of such provision. It is not nature alone that gives perfection to their works; artists must be assisted by study, observation, and practice, without which genius is insufficient, and the intense application necessary thereto, frequently affects both their health and circumstances, while the inconsiderate part of the world are apt to conceive a contempt for the art, from the appearance, and even the misfortunes, of the artist.

It is also certain, that private artists, by assisting one another, have brought these arts to such perfection, as justly entitled them to public patronage, and therefore give rise to those academies and institutions which do honour to the countries where they are established; and whoever consults the history and progress of the arts, must be sensible that, in proportion to such encouragement, they have either flourished or declined.

These artists acknowledge that spirit of encouragement which the public, during their late exhibitions, expressed in their favour; they consider it as a promising omen of their future success, and can by no means omit so favourable an opportunity of enabling merit to emerge from obscurity, and guard against the accidents of life they are subject to, in common with the rest of mankind, and which too often render them the greatest objects of compassion; because true merit is generally accompanied with modesty.

We, the subscribers, therefore, having maturely considered what is promised, agree to form ourselves into an institution, founded on the sentiments of honour, compassion, and prudence, to be called 'A FREE SOCIETY OF ARTISTS,' associated for the Relief of the Distressed and Decayed Brethren and their Widows and Children. And by a perseverance in this resolution, to deserve the further countenance of the public, at a time when the fine arts have been so remarkably patronized, and for carrying our design into execution, we do hereby make the following rules for the government of the Society:—

“First. It is agreed there shall be one annual exhibition, and all artists in painting, sculpture, or architecture, who shall exhibit one or more of their performances, at such time, and in such place and manner, as directed, shall become members of this Society, upon their conforming to the regulations hereafter specified.

Every artist who shall, for five years successively, exhibit as above, shall become a perpetual member of this Society. But, as accidents may happen, any members, after exhibiting for two years successively, may omit one year (at one time only) on paying the sum of two guineas towards the fund for that year, and continue such omissions and payments till they have completed five years exhibitions, in which case, and not before, they shall be deemed perpetual members.

Provided that sickness or necessary absence out of these kingdoms (the reality and necessity of which being made appear to the society) shall not forfeit any privilege to members, if on recovery or return, they fulfil the five years' exhibitions, as prescribed; nor shall a member's death, after being admitted into this Society deprive his widow or children of any benefit accruing from the same.

Every artist who exhibited with this body the present year 1762, and who shall sign and seal this agreement before the 25th of March, 1763, shall be deemed a founder of this Society, and the same shall be allowed one of the five years' exhibitions necessary to constitute a perpetual member.

“Second. A general meeting shall be held within ten days after every exhibition, to appoint a time and place for the next, and choose the officers for the ensuing year.

The committee then chosen shall be instructed to prepare for, and direct the manner of the next year's exhibition, according to the following general rules:—

1. They shall reject no works presented to them, but such as are offensive to modesty, or judged unworthy of exhibition.

2. In hanging the pictures, and disposing of other works, they shall shew no respect to persons, but place them in such manner as, to the best of their judgment, shall appear for the advantage of the whole, and the honour of the exhibition. But any person may appeal from their determination to a general meeting, which shall be held, at least, three days before every exhibition.

3. The catalogues shall be made by ranging the artists' names in capital letters and alphabetical order, with their places of abode annexed thereto; immediately under which shall be mentioned the work or works exhibited by such artist, numerically marked in the margin.

4. They shall have the direction of printing and selling catalogues, or fixing a price for admission into the exhibition; and they, or any person by them authorized, shall receive the money for the same, and daily, or weekly, lodge it in some reputable banker's hands, till the expiration of the exhibition. A fair book shall be kept by the secretary, of such receipts and deposits, open to the inspection of any member; and they shall make a faithful report of their management at the next general meeting, in order to be discharged from such annual trust.

Third. For the purposes herein mentioned, there shall be a fund accumulated of not less than £2,000, by the profits of exhibitions, or otherwise, as a foundation for a further provision if found practicable. In order to raise this sum, three fourths of the net produce of such exhibitions, and other receipts, shall be annually accumulated; and the subscribing members hold it as an inviolable principle, that no part, either of the principal or interest be touched till the said accumulations complete the said sum of £2,000. The same is also to be understood of all further accumulations, which are to cease when the Society unanimously agrees thereto.

Fourth. As many societies have suffered through the cunning of ill-designing persons, who have taken advantage of their not being duly and legally enrolled, and thereby evaded the payment of sums of money entrusted to them by such societies, it is hereby agreed that this present institution shall be forthwith enrolled of record in his Majesty's Court of King's Bench (it hath been enrolled accordingly). That all monies received shall, so soon as possible, after the same amounts to the sum of £50 be placed out at interest on government or real security, by a majority of officers and committee for the time being, as trustees for the fund; and, in case of death of any of them, a general meeting shall be called immediately, and another appointed in his room. They shall take proper securities, in their own names, and give the Society a declaration of trust; which, with the original deed enrolled, and other securities, shall be deposited in any banker's, or other safe person's hands, to be approved by the Society.

Fifth. The remaining net fourth part of the produce of such exhibitions, and other receipts, with the interest arising from the capital fund, when consolidated, shall be annually appropriated to the relief of the distressed of this body, their widows and children, in equitable and fair proportions, by the Society, at any of their meetings; and the committee may, at any time, discretionally, apply a sum, not exceeding £10, to relieve those who are in immediate distress, or towards the interment of any member; and, in case the whole shall not be expended at the end of any year, the remainder may be applied to what purpose the Society shall agree for the good thereof, according to any by-laws to be hereafter made.

Sixth. There shall be immediately appointed and afterwards annually elected, a president, two vice-presidents, and eight members, who, together, shall be a committee for one year, to manage and direct, as before and hereafter specified, viz., the President (or a vice-president in his absence) to preside and keep order in the Society, and keep the books of by-laws and proceedings. A secretary shall be appointed, who is not, nor shall be a member, during his continuance in that office. He shall take minutes, give notice of meetings to every member, and have charge of the rough minutes only, in order to enter the same in the Society's books. The committee shall also prepare every matter relative to the Society, to be approved or rejected at the general meetings. They shall meet monthly, with power of adjournment; and any member of the Society may attend and vote at such committees, as at the general meetings.

There shall be four quarterly general meetings, besides those appointed before and after the exhibitions, viz., on the 18th day of October (being the feast of St. Luke), the 28th day of January, the 18th of April, and the 18th day of July in every year. The committee shall then report how, and to what extent, they have used the discretionary power intrusted to them, and all other matters, transacted by them; fair books of their proceedings being kept for that purpose.

Eleven members present at a general meeting may proceed to business, and five do the same at a committee. All matters shall be determined by a majority of hands, or, if demanded, by ballot, both in the general meetings and in the committees; and the committee may choose their own chairman, and proceed to business.

Seventh. Any person who shall incline to encourage this laudable undertaking may be elected, and become a temporary or perpetual honorary member, on paying one guinea annually, or ten guineas at one time, and thereby have all free access to exhibitions. Their advice and assistance, at any general meeting, will be duly regarded, but to have no vote under this institution.

Lastly. That this Society hereby reserve a power to themselves and successors, to make what by-laws may, from time to time, be found necessary, towards carrying on this design, and for extending this plan to other laudable purposes, for the improvement of the arts, and the benefit of artists in general; which by-laws are to be prepared by the committee for the time being, and never confirmed at less than two general meetings, which shall be called by letters and public advertisements; it being always understood they do not interfere with, or in any manner contradict, these ordinances, which (as to the original accumulation) are to be considered as fundamental and unalterable for ever."

"This year the Society was enrolled in the Court of King's Bench, Hilary Term, 1763. Roll No. 154. . . . Fifty members signed the roll."

After enrollment, the Society took the name of "THE FREE Society of Artists."

The title-page of this year is similar to the last but printed by James Harrison, opposite Stationers' Hall, Ludgate Street.

1764.

The title-page is the same as the last one.

1765.

"The Society this year left the Society of Arts."

The title-page of the catalogue is as follows:

A Catalogue of the Paintings, Sculptures, Architecture, Models, Drawings, Engravings, &c., now exhibiting by the BODY of ARTISTS associated for the RELIEF of their Distressed BRETHREN, their WIDOWS and CHILDREN at Mr. MORING'S GREAT ROOM, in MAIDEN LANE, COVENT GARDEN. This catalogue is entered in the Hall-books of the Company of Stationers.

Printed by James Harrison, &c.

The following is a paragraph and note in Edwards's "Anecdotes of Painters":

The exhibition (Society of Artists), thus established, continued at the Spring Garden Room, under the direction and management of the principal artists by whom it was first promoted, and they were soon after joined by many of those who had continued to exhibit in the Strand; which party being mostly composed of young men, and others who chose to become candidates for the premiums given by the Society for the Encouragement of the Arts, thought it prudent to remain under their protection. But the Society finding that those who continued with them began to diminish in their numbers, and that the exhibition interfered with their own concerns, no longer indulged them with the use of their room, and the exhibitions at that place terminated in 1764.

"These artists, who were mostly the younger part of the profession at that time, being thus excluded from the situation they had formerly occupied in the Strand, engaged a large room in Maiden Lane, Covent Garden, belonging to a person of the name of Moring, where they exhibited for two successive seasons (namely 1765 and 1766). But this situation not being favourable, they engaged with Mr. Christie, in building his room, near Cumberland house, Pall Mall, and the agreement was, that they should have it for their use during one month every year, in the spring. Here they contrived to support a feeble exhibition for eight years (till the year 1774), when their engagements interfering with Mr. Christie's auctions, he purchased their share of the premises, and they made their last removal to a room in St. Alban's Street, where they exhibited the next season, but never after attempted to attract public notice. It must be observed, that while this Society existed, there were annually three exhibitions of the works of English artists, namely, The Royal Academy; the Chartered Society; and that which is mentioned in this note, the members of which styled themselves The Free Society of Artists. Their exhibition was considerably inferior to those of their rivals.

At this time, the Society's funds amounted to £600 Three per Cent. stock.

1767.

The title-page is now altered to

" A CATALOGUE of the Paintings, Sculptures, Designs in Architecture, Models, Drawings, Prints, &c., now exhibiting by the FREE SOCIETY OF ARTISTS, associated for the Relief of their Distressed and Decayed Brethren, their Widows and Children, at the TWO NEW GREAT EXHIBITION ROOMS IN PALL MALL, next the Bottom of the HAY-MARKET.

Being the eighth Year of their Exhibition.

PRINTED FOR THE SOCIETY by James Harrison, opposite to Stationers' Hall.

The Exhibition produced £245 16s. 8d.

The following notices appear in this Catalogue:

 From the Commencement of this Association, not a single Member, afflicted with sickness, &c., ever applied in vain; they have been relieved with, from three, five ten to fifteen and twenty Guineas each:—and, besides the Cash in the Treasurer's Hands, this Society hath now, in the Bank, six hundred Pounds, three per Cents, which cannot be alienated from the Purposes in the Plan, on any Pretence whatever.

* * SUBSCRIPTIONS for Honorary Members are taken in by Mr. Basire, the Treasurer, at his House in Great Queen street, Lincoln's Inn Fields; or by Mr. Furman, the Secretary, in the Inner Temple; where Plans and Proceedings of this Society may be had, gratis.

 The performances marked thus* are to be disposed of: and a person attends in the Rooms with the Prices.

Those marked § are in the Print Room.

(It will be noticed that in calling this the eighth year they included the Exhibition of 1760.)

1768.

The title-page of this year is similar to the last, but they call the galleries " The Great Room in Pall Mall and the ninth year of their Exhibition.

 Every Purchaser of a performance will be entitled to a free admission ticket during the exhibition.

The receipts were this year £142 8s. 3d.

Mr. Pye states that " Up to this period (when the Royal Academy was established) 100 members had signed the Society's Roll, and, consequently, had embarked in the principles of provident care. This Society published from time to time a statement of its progress. The following copy of one of the last of these publications shews alike the growth of the Society's power, its practical utility and its ulterior views.

"From the commencement of this association, not a single member afflicted with sickness, etc., ever applied in vain; they have been relieved with from three, five, ten, fifteen, twenty, up to one hundred guineas each; and, besides the cash in the treasurer's hands, this Society hath now in the bank £1,200 Three per cents., which cannot be alienated from the above purposes in the plan on any pretence whatever.

"If the public continues to favour their intentions, this Society may be able, in a few years, not only to provide for the distressed, and to found an Academy, but also to give premiums for the encouragement of every branch in the polite arts."

(Mr. Pye's account of the Free Society does not go beyond this date; the further particulars are taken from the catalogues themselves.)

1769.

The title-page of this year is similar to the last, but the address is "at Mr. Christie's, New Great Room, next Cumberland House, Pall Mall." A motto appears for the first time—"Unanimity."

Printed for the Society by Mary Harrison, opposite Stationers' Hall.

1770.

The title-page is nearly the same as in 1769, the difference being that the word "Free" is omitted before Society of Artists, and they state that it is the eleventh year of their Exhibition, which was left out in the previous year.

1771.

The title-page is the same as before, with the "twelfth" year substituted.

1772.

Title-page as before, with the word "thirteenth."

1773.

Title-page the same, only the "Fourteenth." Inside the catalogue is the following statement:

"A short State of the Society's Accounts, brought down from the year 1766, when the Society had £600 stock, 3 per Cents., in the Bank of England, to the year 1772 inclusive.

1776.

The title-page is different from the last.

"A Catalogue of the Pictures, Sculptures, &c., by the Society of ARTISTS (continued from the year 1759, upon the ORIGINAL INSTITUTION), now open to the PUBLIC at their EXHIBITION ROOM in St. Alban's Street, Pall Mall.

Printed for the Society By M. Harrison, No. 2, Red Lion Court, Fleet Street.

The following motto appears this time:

"Quod fuit auditu gratum cecinere Poetæ, Quod pulchrum aspectu pictores pingere curant."

1777.

There was no exhibition this year.

1778.

The title-page of this year is the same as in 1776.

1779.

The title-page is the same as in 1776.

1780.

The title-page is the same as in 1776.

1781.

There was no exhibition in this year.

1782.

The title-page is this year different. They call themselves "Free Society of Artists" again, and state that it is the 21st year of their Exhibition, and the Catalogue is Six-Pence.

The following notice appears inside the Catalogue:

"This Exhibition was hastily collected to avoid the Society from suffering a loss by the Forfeiture of their Room, it being an Article in their Agreement with the Landlord. The indulgence of the Public is hoped for by the Exhibitors, who trust, the severity of criticism will be softened by the Consideration that the End intended is to relieve the Distresses of the Ingenious and their Families.

"A Person attends in the Room to give information of the Prices of the Performances marked with a * that are to be sold.

"Any Persons who wish to belong to the Society, or to contribute to the support of it, are desired to send for a plan of the Institution (which has Merit to claim the Patronage of the Public) to Mr. Hagarty, Painter, in Queen Street, Golden Square."

1783.

The title-page of this the last Catalogue is similar to 1782, but is held at the Great Rooms, No. 28 in the Haymarket, for the year 1783, being the 22nd Year of their Exhibition.

At the back of the title-page is the following:

"This Society claim the Merit of being the first who produced an Exhibition in this country; it ranked amongst its Exhibitors the most respected Painters, Engravers, and some of the first Architects; but the fascinating charm of a Royal Exhibition induced many to desert it, and the false delicacy of some were hurt by the plan being founded for the purposes of charitably contributing to relieve the distresses of their brother Artists. The Public, however, have seen the Institution in its proper light; and, from the first to the last, have afforded the warmest Encouragement, and not withheld their powerful Patronage."

"Notwithstanding Death and Desertion have reduced the number of Members of this Society, the Wish of being able to relieve Distress continues to animate the present Members, and prompts them still to support the original institution. They wish to be considered not as Rivals to any other Society, but as the nursery of Young Artists, whose works, if placed near those of a ROYAL Academician, may make no very respectable Figure, yet the Dawning of Genius deserves Protection.

"Some Pictures appearing in this Exhibition, the Labour of Artists belonging to other Societies, it is necessary to say, they are sent in by Gentlemen who are desirous of contributing to the Entertainment of the Public, and do service to this Society; and those Gentlemen who wish to belong to, or exhibit with it, either as Artists, or Honorary Members, are desired to send their address to Mr. Hagarthy, Queen Street, Golden Square.

"The Plan is now laid before the Public, if they in general, and the Artists in particular, will warmly support it, they will do great credit to themselves; if not, the Endeavours of the few Artists who now constitute the Society, must fail; but they will have the heartfelt satisfaction of having discharged their Duty as Men; they have brought forward to Reputation some of the most eminent, and they have relieved some of the most unfortunate."

"A short ABSTRACT of this SOCIETY'S PROCEEDINGS.

In the year 1762 this Society was founded on the above plan. This metropolis afforded them numerous instances of patronage; and their association succeeded, even beyond the expectation of its members.

The manner by which the fund is raised appears by the plan; and, though but an infant body, the Society apprehend it may not be amiss to acquaint the public with this first account of their proceedings.

From the commencement of this association, not a single member, afflicted with sickness, etc., ever applied in vain; they have been relieved with, from three, five, ten, fifteen, twenty, and one hundred guineas each; and, besides the cash in the Treasurer's hands, this Society hath now in the Bank Twelve Hundred Pounds, three per cents., which cannot be alienated from the above purposes in the plan, on any pretence whatever.

If the Public continue to favour our intentions, this Society may be able, in a few years, to soften the rigour of distress, in a liberal and extensive manner, to every Artist who may be under the necessity of making an application.

BY THE SAME COMPILER

THE WORKS OF SIR EDWIN LANDSEER, R.A. A chronological catalogue of the pictures, drawings, and sculpture by this popular artist, with a complete list of the engravings after his works. Dedicated by special permission to Her Majesty Queen Victoria, 1874. Price 2s. 6d.

THE WORKS OF SAMUEL COUSINS, R.A. Arranged chronologically. 1888. Price 2s. 6d.

THE WORKS OF SIR THOMAS LAWRENCE, P.R.A. Compiled as a supplement to Lord Ronald Sutherland-Gower's life of the artist (Goupil and Co.).

A DICTIONARY OF ARTISTS WHO HAVE EXHIBITED IN LONDON FROM 1760 TO 1893. With many additions and corrections. Price £2 2s.

This work, which has become a standard book of reference in all art matters, was published first in 1884, when this edition sold out. The second edition, enlarged and improved, was published in 1895. This edition, being also exhausted and the demand for the work having increased, a third edition was published in 1901.

HISTORY OF THE WORKS OF SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS, P.R.A.

This exhaustive work was published in 1899 in three volumes at 25 guineas, and dedicated by special permission to Her Majesty Queen Victoria, and a fourth supplementary volume was issued in 1901 at 10 guineas, and dedicated by special permission to His Majesty King Edward VII. The edition was limited to 125 copies, and was sold out a year before publication. The four volumes can only be obtained now at a high premium.

THE ROYAL ACADEMY OF ARTS. Dictionary of Exhibitors from 1769 to 1904. Dedicated by special permission to His Majesty King Edward VII. Compiled with the sanction of the President and Council of the Royal Academy. Completed in Eight volumes in 1907, and published at £2 2s. per volume net.

This work is only sold in complete sets, except to exhibitors only, who can have the volume containing their own list of exhibits. Can be had of the compiler at 42, Old Bond Street, or Messrs. George Bell and Sons, Portugal Street, Lincoln's Inn Fields.

In Progress.

THE BRITISH INSTITUTION, 1806-1867. Companion work to the "Royal Academy Exhibitors" and the "Society of Artists Exhibitors."

The success of the first two works of this character has induced Mr. Graves to commence a list of Exhibitors at this most important and, during the first half of the nineteenth century, well-known series of Exhibitions.

At the present day the British Institution is well-nigh forgotten; it was started in 1806 by a party of noblemen and gentlemen interested in the Fine Arts, and it was from the first under Royal Patronage. It was never intended that the Exhibitions should be in rivalry with the Royal Academy, and in the result the Members of the Royal Academy themselves became very conspicuous Exhibitors.

No list of the works of the more important artists can be in any way complete if the contributions to this famous Institution are not included.

Will be published in one volume containing about 600 pages, and limited to 500 copies, at £3 3s. Subscribers' names received by the compiler at 42, Old Bond Street, or by Messrs. George Bell and Sons, Portugal Street, Lincoln's Inn Fields, W.C.
